

6.4)

Show that the geodesic on the surface of a right circular cylinder is a segment of a helix.

→ When it says "show" the path, use the techniques of calculus of variations to find an equation $y = f(x)$, $z = f(x, y)$, or $z = f(\theta)$ for the path, then explain how this function is the type of path desired.